- For the initial round of disbursements (June 2021) from the CRRSAA and ARP (a)(1) programs, Western Seminary determined that students experiencing a financial crisis that had arisen due to coronavirus could be considered for an Emergency Financial Aid Grant. Students eligible under that criteria received an award between $575 and $2,300, with the amount based on the nature of the financial crisis (lost income or increased expenses) and prior financial need, with priority given to those students demonstrating financial need as determined by the FAFSA (Expected Family Contribution).

- Approximately $145,000 in Emergency Financial Aid from the CRRSAA and ARP (a)(1) programs remain available to distribute to students experiencing a financial crisis that had arisen due to coronavirus. On March 9, 2022, Western Seminary was granted a no cost extension for our institution's HEERF grant award(s). An implementation plan is being put in place to meet this extended deadline.

In the following months, the Financial Aid office is staged to communicate and identify need-based students in order to disburse funds to eligible students while remaining on target for the extended deadline of June 30, 2023.
- The Financial Aid office has developed a plan for determining eligible need-based students with priority given to those students demonstrating financial need as determined by the FAFSA (Expected Family Contribution).
